1	Birth Registration (BC) - With Civil Marriage Registration	For first child registration, NRD would request father of the child to be present to allow father's name to be put in Birth Certificate. Challenges present when father is in prison, travel on work purpose and etc		Marriage registration and IC copies provided by mother or eyewitness should be sufficient to register children
2	Late Birth Registration (BC) - Without Civil Marriage Registration	NRD does not allow father's information to be included in the BC without mother being present in NRD. In this cases, Father's detail will only be included as informer. Despite providing DNA test proof and SD, NRD does not include the father's details in BC Child will be classified as "illegitimate" and reference is then made to s17 Part III of 2nd Schedule FC. Under s17 reference to parents means reference to "his mother". This will complicate matters where the mother is a stateless person or a foreigner or her whereabouts cannot be trace. Contrast this with s19B Part III FC - presumed until the contrary is shown to have born there of a mother with PR status. The burden		Taking into consideration the best interests of the child, NRD should allow DNA results to be accepted as proof of paternity and allow necessary amendment on the birth certificate should the child not be able to obtain citizenship via his/her mother.

5	Search & Extraction for Birth Cert & Identity Card	Each search & extraction application can stretch up to 3 months long		Shorten the time period for NRD searches for previous applications and birth registration records Application forms should be accepted whilst S&E is in process. 6	Search & Extraction for Birth Cert	BC S&E is only performed in State office		BC S&E should be performed in District office

Malaysian fathers can register their children under Article 14 of the Federal Constitution and complete Form D for the application of citizenship, a fairly streamlined process which may be completed in a few days. In contrast, Malaysian mothers must register their children under Article 15(2) and complete Form B for the application of citizenship.

Procedural & Policy Recommendation for Statelessness and Documentation Issues

The recommendations set out above offer realistic and practical solutions within the current legal framework to resolve the citizenship status of “Stateless Malaysians” amongst the Indian Community & other races in West Malaysia. If adopted and implemented these could help all eligible members of the community realize their legal identity as Malaysian citizens and facilitate their sustainable and inclusive development, ensuring that they are not left behind in Malaysia’s continued development. DHRRA would welcome the opportunity to work with relevant Government to implement these recommendations. Following to address legal documentation issue and statelessness, DHRRA propose the following mechanism to address the documentation issue at its core and contribute to the eradication of statelessness among Malaysian Indian Community in Malaysia. Based on the on-going experience and understanding of the gaps and needs of Malaysian Indian Community:

- i) Mapping & Identification in other states (except: Perak, Selangor, Negeri Sembilan, Kedah)
 - Preferably to conduct door to door exercise as many pre independence cases don’t turn up during roadshows
- ii) Assistance in Registration
 - The registered individuals are guided in submitting application to NRD with consideration of procedural recommendation stated above.
- iii) Awareness
 - Dissemination of information is important to ensure the value of birth registration and identity documents are well known by the members of the Malaysian Indian Community. Moreover, by continuous discussion on this matter, more people will come forward to address their documentation challenges and reduce the risk of statelessness

In addition to statelessness community West Malaysia, DHRRA continues to offer its expertise to East Malaysia with its mixed migrational context and its own challenges in accordance to Sabah local Ordinance.
